COHERENCE

Forming a unified whole.....

2nd INTERNATIONAL MULTIDISCIPLINARY LAW CONFERENCE
20 - 21 October, 2016

BACKGROUND NOTE

A sincere experiment on Interdisciplinary Integration for Legal Enrichment in the form of first International Multidisciplinary Law Conference in October, 2015 resulted in a stupendous success of the same where multidisciplinary practices (MDP) proved that that MDP in Law can create new and innovative explanations and are more competitive in offering legal solutions.

Motivated by the success, a second attempt is made to organize Second International Multidisciplinary Law Conference, titled, COHERENCE – Forming a unified whole... at Symbiosis Law School, Hyderabad on 20-21 October, 2016, whose rationale is described below:

CONCEPT NOTE

Multidisciplinary Legal Research is an approach that is not limited by too restrictive methodology in support of sophisticated analysis, but, often by syntheses. The conceptual analysis of law discovers the internal logic of a certain law. However, as we know, the life of law has not been logic, but, been experience (Holmes & Wendel 1881). The essence of law is in its function, and this function can be realized only by the operation and application of law. Conceptual approaches cannot grasp this operation merely through analysis of concepts, but Functional approaches contribute to the understanding of law, leading us to a theoretical concept of law.

Of course, the analytical-conceptual approach can be highly helpful in cognition, but this is true in the case of developed legal systems that were founded on a conceptual basis.

Although Grotius and Pufendorf reminded us of the culturally determined character of law, the variety and range of legal forms and legal systems became clearer through the opening of the historical and geographical perspectives.

The historical view and the interpretation of social processes on the basis of their causes and effects brought a sociological view to the center, while sociology shaped as an independent discipline. Legal sociology, thus, developed a separate niche for research banking on the works of Gumplowicz (1909) and Max Weber (1978), thus, enlarging the perspective of legal philosophy. Also the revolution of psychology, including the research of Pierre Janet, Sigmund Freud, Alfred Adler and Carl Gustav Jung, touched legal philosophy adequately. Theories relating to culture and anthropology helped comparative legal research, and legal anthropology emerge; the systematic and scientific analysis of the literature formed a special research stream called, "law and literature" and study of economy laid the foundation for economic analysis of law. The positivity of MDP is its judicious integration thus propagating its need to have a better society with well resolved problems. Many observers state pragmatically that for all intents and purposes, the MDP revolution has already arrived in relation to corporate practice.
