Online Internship Programme

For Law Students

We, at TheLawBlog (TLB), are pleased to announce our Online Internship Programme for law students across the country. Introducing the platform, TLB is an online platform designed with the sole intention of spreading legal awareness amongst the netizens. The platform will be primarily focusing on the Indian Legal System in doing so.

The internship will require legal writing, and therefore is recommended for law students only. However, students from other branch also may apply for the same and will be considered after following the due process.

NATURE OF THE INTERNSHIP

The interns are expected to submit at least one article (around 500-1000 words) per week, the deadline being Friday evening for each week. Anything relating to law will be acceptable, provided the intern have tried to explain the topic clearly in the article.

Further details will be provided to the applicants after they have been selected for the online internship programme.

BENEFITS

- Recognition:

While posting the article on the website, due credit will be given to the respective authors.

- An enriching experience:

We assure the interns a highly enriching experience while interning with us. Along with working for spreading legal awareness, we'll also work together on improving your writing skills, in a cooperative setup.

- Critical appraisal:

The write-ups of the interns will be critically evaluated and the interns will be provided with positive appraisal as well as suggestions to further improve their writing skills.

- Certificate of Internship:

The interns, at the end of the internship, will be provided with an online certificate of internship to showcase their valuable experience.
